The Reason For It.

When the Republic assures the editor of this paper that he, in connection with other Democrats of greater prominence in this State, "would catch it" should not keep in line with Governor Stone and the Post-Dispatch, it shows that it neither comprehends the political forces at work among us, nor the people moved by them. It wholly misrepresents the sources from whence the Governor and its rival derive their strength. No one under ordinary circumstances would take an abiding interest in the political fortunes of William J. Stone or David R. Francis, outside of their immediate followings; no one would be greatly interested in the bickerings between the Republic and the Post-Dispatch. The dispute would bore the readers of each paper until a majority of them would pass it over with a feeling of regret that so much valuable space had been used to so little purpose.

But the circumstances are not ordinary. A vast majority of the Democrats of this State believe that a deliberate attempt is being made to cut their party adrift from its ancient moorings, and to abandon its time-honored principles in matters of finance. They see leaders turning their backs upon the principles of life-time at the dictation of an administration professedly Democratic—an administration placed in power by their votes, but which they have come to regard as being guilty of as foul treason as ever disgraced the annals of political history. In 1893 they saw their St. Louis organ fall into the hands of the Tory element and at once cast behind it principles that it had advocated for twenty years, and enter upon a course of dissimulation and double-dealing, at once ridiculous and disgusting.

At the beck of Wall Street they behold John G. Carlisle, Roger Q. Mills, Josiah Patterson, the Louisville Courier-Journal, with poor old Henry Waterson, like a shorn Sampson, bound to its chariot wheels, and in this State John C. Tarsney, David R. Francis, and others whom they have trusted, turn their backs upon their past and unblushingly take the road to the Republican camp.

They have heard consistency sneered at as the virtue of little minds. They have seen platforms, put forth in the most solemn and authoritative manner, ridiculed by those who helped to construct them. They have listened with astonishment to the denunciation by party leaders of traditions born with the party as being fulminations of the Populist, until they are beginning to suspect that their beloved organization is honeycombed by a vast conspiracy to completely place it in Tory hands and destroy its usefulness to the people. They have no personal feeling against any man or class of men; but they are determined that the cause of bimetalism and its champions shall not be assassinated in this State, if they can help it. Whether right or wrong, they have come to look upon Stone, Vest, Bland, Cockrell, and the editor of the Post-Dispatch, as champions of bimetalism; and Francis, Maffitt, Norton, and the Republic, as fighting under the yellow flag of Wall Street. So long as Governor Stone, Mr. Bland, and Senator Vest, lead the people in the path they wish to travel, their methods will not be apt to be called in question. Mr. Johns may stretch his ears until they are long enough for fire escapes; Colonel Phelps may let the whole traveling public ride upon his strength; and Fred Lehman may go into the Sound Money campaign until the legal affairs of his railroads are hopelessly involved; but they will find themselves powerless to injure Gov. Stone or the Post-Dispatch so long as they continue true to the people.

Had the Republic not changed its policy when it changed its management, it would have retained its old place in the hearts of the rank and file of the people. It would have occupied the place that is now occupied by the Post-Dispatch. Had Mr. Francis stood upon the campaign professions that he made in 1888 he would not now be an object of distrust to a large majority of the men who then honored him with place and power. In the last year, under the management of Col. Jones, the Post-Dispatch has become the acknowledged organ of bimetalism in this State. Its editor is believed in and trusted by the people because he was true to their interests while he had charge of the Republic. When he abandons the cause of bimetalism the people will abandon both him and his paper.

Any strictures of the Post-Dispatch upon Monroe Seibert or Alex. Leveque not warranted by the facts will fall to the ground, and the people will steadfastly maintain their good will to these gentlemen despite such untoward criticism. Should the Post-Dispatch tomorrow become the champion of Mr. Francis it would do that gentleman no good and itself much harm.

Democrats for the last twenty years have been denouncing "the crime of '73;" they have been bimetalists from the foundation of the party, and cannot be induced to change their opinion as readily as some people change their coats. The question of bimetalism is one of principle, and not of men. Governor Stone, Secretary Leveque, Mr. Bland, Senator Vest, or any other Democrat, may indulge in any amount of elbow-greasing and shin-kicking; they may have a fancy to, and no one will greatly care; but the moment they attempt to break ranks on the silver question they will come to grief.

The Register was an advocate of bimetalism before Mr. Jones assumed control of the Republic. It could get after its course and expect to retain the confidence of its readers. The lines are being drawn; let each man take his place according to his convictions, but double-dealing will bring disaster to the one engaging in it. The people are done with subterfuge and evasion. The politician or newspaper is very short-sighted that does not realize this fact. Whoever shall attempt it will go down the same as Charles W. Knapp, no matter if he be of blood kin to every man in the State.

Regret, Not "Diatribe."

Eli D. Ake is teaching Democracy to Elijah H. Norton with a copy of "Coin" and a pickled rod of diatribe.—Republic.

On the 14th of last November it became our duty, as editor of a Democratic paper with convictions, to comment upon an article from the pen of Uncle Elijah Norton that appeared in the Republic, in which he took the position that the insignificant band of malcontents who had gained control of the party's machinery were greater than the party itself; that although the Pertle Springs Convention was regularly called and regularly organized, and was therefore the proper and lawful legislative body of the Democracy of this State, it could not authoritatively declare that the State Convention for the selection of delegates to the National Convention should be called to meet at a date not later than April 15th.

Our comments were made more in sorrow than in anger, for we felt that the old man had fallen into the hands of a clique of decayed and discredited politicians who were using him to bolster up their declining fortunes, regardless of his previous good name or party standing. We regretted to see him take so untenable a position for the benefit of the corporation lawyer, the railroad magnate, the national banker, the lobbyist, and others who use political parties for the purpose of private gain, or to prevent the unfair advantages that great aggregations of capital have from time to time obtained through control of party machinery from being interfered with. The folly of Uncle Elijah's position became so apparent that the men who were using him refused longer to make him ridiculous and pulled him down by submitting to the inevitable and recognizing the action of the Pertle Springs Convention as legitimate.

If by "a pickled rod of diatribe" the Republic means that we have continuously preached sound Democratic doctrine, despite its howl for harmony, we confess judgment, and further admit that the rod has been somewhat salty for the flock of cuckoos for whom the Wall Street organ has become the mouthpiece.

It would have been very comforting to these people, if, after the Pertle Springs Convention, the Democracy of this State had gone quietly and peacefully to sleep and permitted the fixer, the ward-heeler, and the practical politician, to undo the work of that Convention. Any note of warning to the people was an inharmonious proceeding. Any exposure of the manipulations of the Sound Money Club looking to the reversal of the expressed will of the party was monstrous. The mere mention of the fact that the present campaign to reverse Democratic precedents and abandon Democratic principles is conducted from the law office of John W. Noble, Harrison's Secretary of the Interior, and that there is a strong suspicion of an un-biblical cord existing between this Sound Money Club and the Republican organization is scandalous. Any attempt on the part of the party to defend its principles, any protest on the part of its rank and file against being led into the Republican ranks, is the most senseless perversity and the most brutal ferocity.

The air of injured innocence assumed by these gentlemen is amusing. It is they who are honest, sincere and disinterested. It is they who know what is best for the people and who are sufficiently wise and good to be entrusted with their interests. Of course the great mass of the common people of this country are not the "equals" of this class of men. In the party as elsewhere, the wise few must control the ignorant and besotted many. This is the old Tory doctrine the world over, and the sooner the Democratic party is rid of its Tories the better it will be for it. There is one hopeful indication about the Republic, and but one. It reads the Register and other Democratic papers of Southeast Missouri. So long as it does this, it will keep within sight of sound Democratic doctrine.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Beach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by all dealers.
